Synchronous Instruction: Students and teachers online at the same time. This could be teachers giving a lecture, students chatting with one another with the teacher present asking questions, or small groups working together.

Asynchronous Instruction: This is when students work independently on an assignment given by the teacher. Most often, assignments will be based on the lesson that just took place.

Applied Learning: This is when students work independently on an assignment given by the teacher. They may be asked to gather information from home, work on projects, work with other students remotely to complete a project or assignment, or apply the information that has been presented in class.

Student Engagement and Wellness: This time is essentially Office Hours. Teachers will be reaching out to students who need extra help, students can contact teachers for extra help, and other support will be available for students through counselors, coaches, and advisors.
